

Nigel Maris, a partner in AES was keen to develop his company and workforce, with a strong belief in continuous improvement and quality to achieve organisational success. Working in collaboration with Semta they carried out a full analysis of the company's goals, and investigated what training should be implemented to help it achieve these ambitions.

B-IT Level 2 was successfully implemented across the company and the programme has continued to gather momentum. As a direct result of B-IT training, staff productivity has increased by 22% and staff are now more involved in decision making which has increased motivation.

To highlight this success Semta have nominated AES for an award at the forthcoming inaugural Made in Midlands Achievements Awards supported by Business Report in recognition of their return on investment in skills.
